14. (Currently Amended) An apparatus for managing traffic in a network involving a communication device with a limited power supply, the apparatus comprising characterized by:

a transceiver for receiving and transmitting data messages;

a controller for monitoring a current power level of said power supply and a ~~calculated~~ power drain rate of said communication device, wherein said controller includes means for:

receiving all of said data messages; redirecting ~~all of said~~ said data messages to a predetermined location; and based on the current power level, receiving a portion of said data messages and directing the remainder of said data messages to a predetermined address based on the power level; and means coupled to said power supply for determining said power drain rate of said communication device; signal means for signaling said communication device to receive or transmit data messages according to said current power level and said power drain rate, wherein a quality of service level provided to the communication device in the network is changed in response to said power level calculations, wherein if said current power level and said power drain rate are sufficient to transfer said quantity of data, said controller commencing the transfer of said quantity of data and if said current power level and said power drain rate are not sufficient, said controller transferring a portion of said quantity of data to the communication device and transferring the remainder of said quantity of data to a predetermined destination, the address of which is sent to the communication device for retrieving the remainder of said quantity of data.

15. (Original) The apparatus of Claim 14, further characterized by:

a database for storing initial parameters for said power supply of said communication device and periodically updating said power supply parameters, wherein said parameters include:

a drain rate for each communication service available to said communication device; and an initial power source level upon connection to the network.

16. (Canceled)
